

Template 1:

Joe's Auto Shop

Joe owns an Auto Shop and needs the front desk phone and the two phones in the shop to ring at the same time so that no customer calls are missed.

Template 2:

Stacy's Medical Supply Distributor

Stacy's office has its own receptionist who fields all incoming calls. Any calls to their main number will go to the receptionist, and then to voicemail if the receptionist doesn't answer.

Template 3:

Dave's Bakery, Inc.

Dave's Bakery Inc. has several locations around town. When a customer calls Dave's Bakery, they need to be able to reach the different locations, and also be able to check Dave's business hours. Dave uses an Auto Attendant to manage this for him, so his employees don't have to waste time answering and routing calls, or repeating business hours to multiple callers.

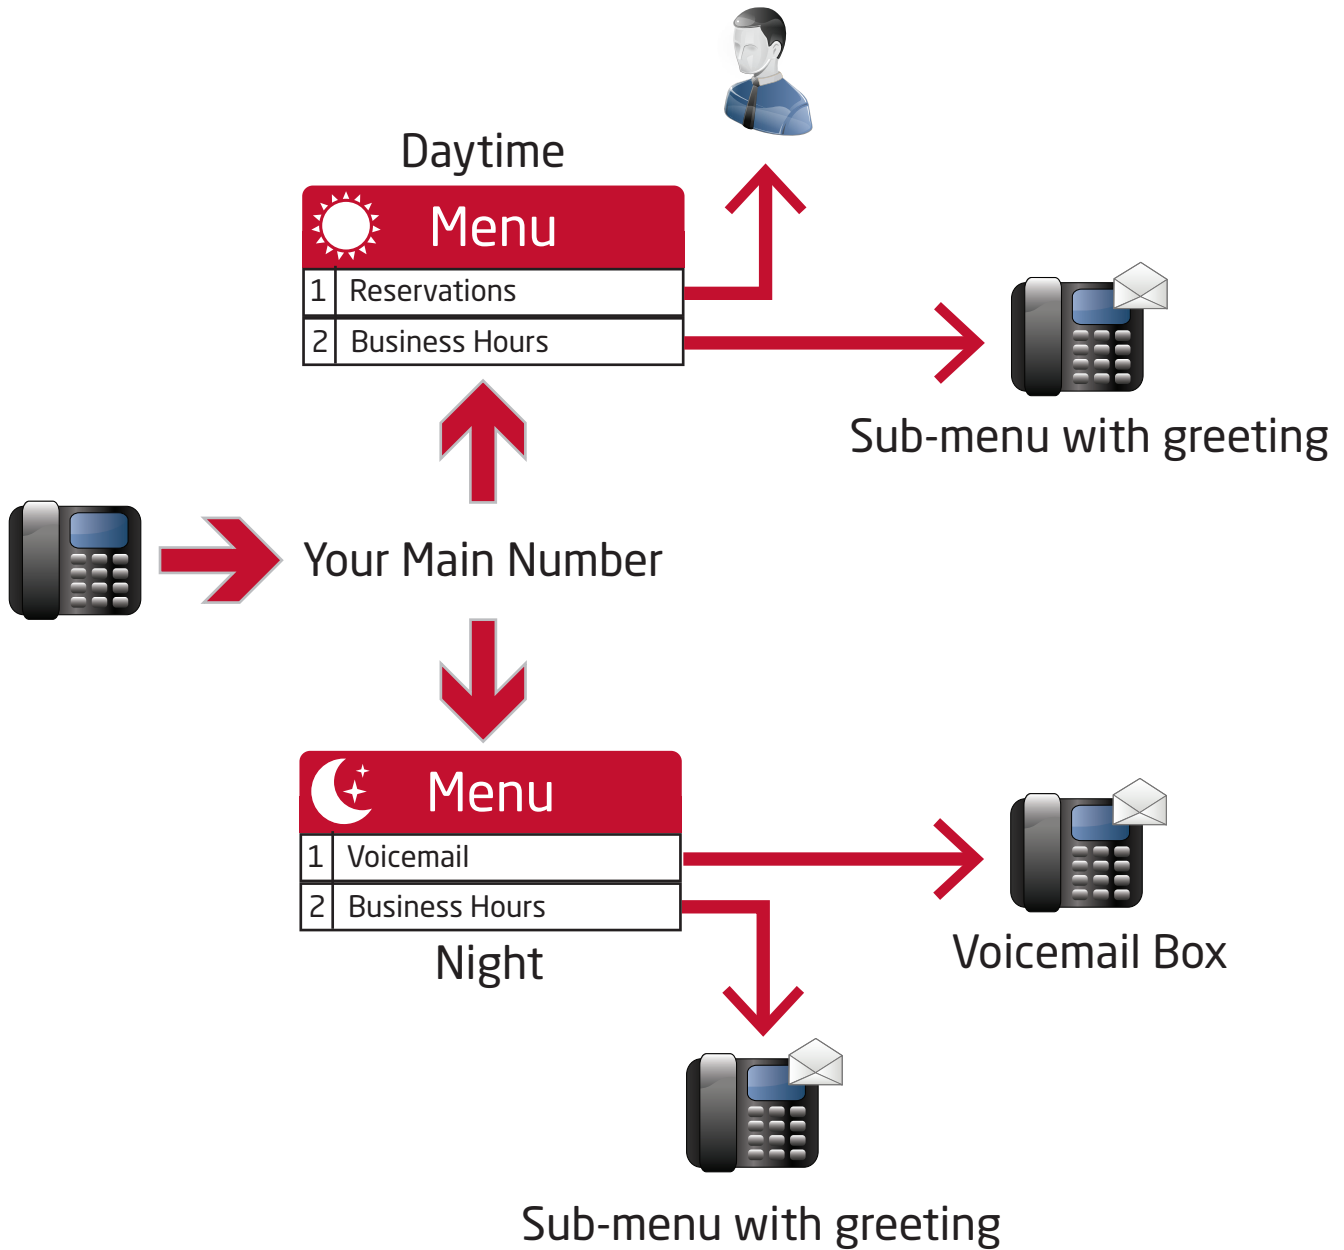

Template 4:

Sam's Gourmet Restaurant

Sam just opened a new restaurant and wants to make sure that people can make reservations and check operating hours while they are open. After the restaurant is closed, he wants to make sure callers can still check operating hours, but only leave a message for reservations.
